ASSISTANT INSPECTOR TO BE MASON

Place Will be Filled by Common Council to Whom Inspector Reports.

If Mayor Does not Veto Ordinance Incumbent Will be Named in April.

New Office Much Needed Has Been Long Under Consideration—Views of Aldermen upon the Matter — Plumbers Wanted Member of Their Craft.

The local unions of journeymen bricklayers and stone masons who have been striving for over a year to secure an assistant building inspector who should be a competent mason, were victorious last night, when the Common Council voted to create the position by a vote of 16 to 6, Alderman Foyrer not voting and Alderman Finlan being absent. The Aldermen voting against the ordinance, as recommended by the Ordinance committee, were Wilson, Fletcher, Bertillon, Zink, Wilder and Bullard.

Chairman Gould of the Ordinance committee explained the ordinance, which provides for the election of the assistant inspector by the council and places him under the supervision of the Building Commissioner at a salary of $1,000 per annum. He said that the present building inspector was elected by the Building Commission, but that the building inspector was responsible to the council and was obliged to make reports to it, therefore he felt the council was perfectly competent to select a competent man to fill the present place. The ordinance was drawn in answer to a resolution presented to the council a month before by Alderman John H. McMurray. He said he had been visited by several men who had expressed this opinion that the assistant inspector should be a plumber, among these was Building Commissioner DuBois. But the committee on looking into the matter, found that the claims that a plumber was needed more than a mason were not well borne out.

Alderman Griffin, a builder by trade, said that he believed the majority of builders in the city would agree that a mason inspector was needed. If Building Commissioner Rowland had not been reappointed, he would have favored that the assistant inspector be a plumber. But as the present inspector was thoroughly conversant with plumbing and carpentry work he believed the assistant should be a mason. He concluded by saying there was nothing in the charter to settle disputes between the Building Commissioners and the inspector.

Alderman Clifford B. Wilson presented several arguments against the passage of the ordinance. He thought it was too soon to create the position and moved that the matter be laid upon the table indefinitely. A few years ago when the city had its largest building boom he said that Inspector Rowland did all the work and he did not see why he could not do it now when the work was less. He said the tax payers should be considered, but several others said they believed the tax payers were best looked after if it secured a more efficient building inspector. Alderman O'Connell said he believed all taxpayers would be anxious to get honest masonry if they were building a new or other structure. Wilson further argued there was not one penny to pay the new inspector and that the Building Commission have to have supervision of the office.

Alderman Griffin told Alderman Wilson that he did not think he had been around much for he was at least not familiar with the conditions as he (Griffin) had not seen so many cellars dug in the city in any spring as he dug this year. Alderman McMurray said everybody present ought to remember that there had been a new building boom in the city in Union Square, and that there had been complaints against others. He added that he would like to refresh the minds of his colleagues by the very able committee appointed to investigate the cause for the building falling had recommended in its report that the city should have a mason inspector. He thought Alderman Wilson should know that this board is not trying to appoint officers to unnecessary places in order to spend the people's money. No one is finding fault with Mr. Rowland. Other cities have these inspectors for the protection of life and limb and the cannot be too careful in the stability of the buildings which we erect.

If the Mayor does not veto the measure the council will fill the office during the month of April, next.

Power to Resist

Infectious and contagious diseases depends most of all on the health and strength of the white blood corpuscles.

They are microscopic bodies whose important function is to destroy disease germs that invade the system through the air we breathe, the water we drink, the food we eat, and otherwise.

If you are pale, nervous, easily tired, with little or no appetite, or if you are troubled with any humor, your white blood corpuscles are not healthy and strong and you should begin taking Hood's Sarsaparilla at once.

THE THEATRES

SMITH'S

The celebrated actress of the Yiddish stage, Mme. Sarah Adler, wife of the Yiddish Co., which will appear in the city, has been engaged to play a series of plays are well known even outside of those who understand the Yiddish language. They will present a new and original drama of Yiddish life in America, "The Broken Heart," written by the Yiddish playwright, Z. L. bin specially for Mme. Adler.

Lawrence Evart and his company will appear for two performances tomorrow, when he will present "Walk-About," a comedy in three acts, "We Are King," Mr. Evart will be seen in the dual role which Mr. White-side so successfully played for three seasons.

Henry B. Harris will produce Thursday, with a special matinee, arranged for by reason of the enormous demand for seats for the evening "The Traveling Salesman," the latest comedy success of James Forbes, author of "The Bohemian Life," with a cast of unusual excellence, including such well known players as Herbert Corthell, Rosalind Coghlan, Diana Hume, James O'Neill, Jr., Emmett Shreve, and William Robert Daly. Marion Stephens, Robert Dudley, Buck Sheffer, Lawrence Sheehan and those two clever child actors, Viola Savoy and Emily Tobin. The story is related by widely contrasting types of villagers and drummers. Without question "The Traveling Salesman" embodies more laughs than any play seen in years and to the jaded theatergoer tired of dry dissertations on intricate problems of the advent of the motor car, a comedy success in this city, should be awaited with interest.

"The Millionaire" and the Police-Station Wife." Theodore Kremer, is the author and he has woven a delicate love story all the way through. The Millionaire and the Police-Station Wife will be seen Friday and Saturday, with daily matinees, and at popular prices.

W. H. Crane, comes next Monday evening in George Ade's "Father and the Boys."

POLI'S

Lovers of real vaudeville are enjoying this week's show at Poli's, a genuine aggregation of clever variety acts. The headline attraction is the one act farce by George Arliss, entitled "His Wife." Mr. William, presented by Charles Evans, the distinguished comedian and a company of three people. The sketch exudes real comedy, the situations are laughable in the extreme and have a spice of novelty wholly pleasing. Mr. Evans has been in the laugh manufacturing business for many years. A time ago he was the Evans of Evans and Hoey, who presented with such marked success the masterpiece comedy, of the late Charles Hoyt, entitled "A Parlor Match." Mr. Evans is just as attractive as a comedian to-day and seems to have lost none of his old time ability to make people laugh. The sketch is a credit to the ability of Mr. Arliss and the genius of Mr. Evans in faultlessly producing it.

A novelty direct from the other side is the Sutcliffe Troupe of Scotch pipers, dancers and acrobats seven in all, presenting an act the like of which has not been seen here before. Harvey & Lee the inimitable Hebrew imitators, cause a goodly portion of the laughter this week. Then there is a clever musical turn in the Hanks-Breazels Duo, talented instrumental performers. Clark & Bergman in a winsome comedy song and dance skit entitled "The Chauffeur and The Maid" are among the best features. There are more laughs when Hickman Bros. & Co. come on with their newest comedy success entitled "A Detective Detected." In the opening position in the week are Young the Oriental juggler, assisted by Edith Wardwell, a clever team offering a real novelty. Pleasing Electrophone films round out a clever bill.

THE MERRY WIDOW PARTY at Quality's tomorrow night, St. Patrick's, will without doubt prove the pleasant place in the city to enjoy a few hours dancing upon the only date in Lent when the rules are relaxed. Every lady who attends will be given a handsome merry widow hat as a souvenir of the occasion. There will be dancing till midnight with music by McManis' orchestra, a good crowd and a good time for everybody. Don't miss it. Admission 25 cents.
